Subject: Implement the Proposed Plan for the Children's Alliance of Yolo County

Recommended Action:

1. Approve the plan and budget to form the transitional office of the Children’s Alliance of Yolo County under the County Administrative Officer. Authorize the County Administrative Officer to provide interim staff and logistical support for a period not to extend beyond December 31, 2002.

2. Adopt the resolution to amend the 2001102 Countywide Expenditure budget (Budget Unit 165-1) increasing the appropriations by $45,000 to finance the contract for the Alliance’s “Score Card”, and to seek and receive funds from identified sources. Authorize including, by transfer, $5,000 from county Contingencies for the county General Fund contribution towards the contract.

3. Authorize staff to develop a Request For Proposal (RFP), negotiate and develop a proposed contract for Board consideration to complete a Yolo County Children and Youth “Score Card”, not to exceed $45,000, with the report due no later than 12 months after signing the contract.

4. Appoint a Supervisor and an alternate member to represent your Board on the Alliance’s Policy Council and Executive Committee,

5. Direct staff to investigate formation of a private non-profit organization as proposed in the plan as the permanent legal structure of the Alliance’s organization and return to your Board with a recommendation no later than December 2002.

6. Authorize members of the Board of Supervisors and staff to seek support for the Alliance from the Yolo Superior Court, city governments, school districts, departments, institutes of higher learning, employers, and other organizations. The goal is the approval of their governing bodies to support of the Children’s Alliance of Yolo County with their commitments of leadership and resources.
Reason for Recommended Action:

In Yolo County, taxpayers annually spend millions of dollars on social, educational, juvenile justice and other services for children and families provided by county government, the schools, and our cities. Non-profit and community agencies, not to mention parents, spend millions more. Yet, today in Yolo County:
- Many families live daily with significant stress caused by violence, depression, severe financial difficulties, or inadequate housing.
- Fifteen percent of all children in the county have no health insurance.
- Twenty percent of children live in families with annual incomes less than $18,000 to support a family of four.

Although more than fifty councils, boards, advisory groups and others work on a broad range of issues affecting children and families we know very little about how well we are doing. Currently there is no way of putting the pieces together to readily discover whether public and private resources are being used most wisely. And, there is no comprehensive mechanism to solve the problems faced by our children to ensure multiple services are being delivered effectively. This is our effort to develop a way by which we can work together to improve the well being of every child by making sense of this web of services that are funded by a multitude of categorical funds.

Background:

On June 27, fifty representatives of city and county governments, school districts, rural communities, the business and faith communities, health care, local non-profit organizations, higher education, parents, youth and others from throughout Yolo County came together and decided that a county-wide alliance would benefit all groups working on behalf of children, youth and families. Rather than create a new layer of bureaucracy, this proposed alliance would be a tool to assess and coordinate existing resources, maximize existing services, and fill gaps. It would:
- Be designed, funded, and “owned” by all sectors of the community.
- Address the “whole child” from birth to 18, rather than specific programs, age groups or funding streams.
- Be committed to insuring continuing and extensive public involvement in its work to support Yolo County’s children and families.
- Identify the areas of greatest need for our kids, focus action and resources to make specific improvements, and be accountable for results.
- Be independent in identity, budget and staff.

On November 20, 2001, your Board received a status report from the Leadership Committee of the Alliance. It reported that since July 2001, a broad representative steering committee has defined the purpose and initial activities of the Yolo Alliance for Kids. The name has changed to Children’s Alliance of Yolo County but the goals remain:
- Assess the condition of Yolo County’s children by developing a “Score Card” measuring the extent to which children are healthy, safe, ready for and succeeding in school, out of trouble, contributing to the community, and prepared for adulthood, both in the county as a whole and within ethnic and geographic communities.

- Use the Score Card to identify the highest priority issues and needs of children and families that can be effectively addressed through collaborative action and resources, and better service delivery. (i.e. gangs, child abuse/substance abuse, after school programs).
- Convene a Children’s Summit to identify community priorities and resources based on the findings of the Score Card.
- Coordinate efforts to address the priority needs identified in the Score Card and Children’s Summit.

Fiscal Impact:

The total proposed first year budget is $168,500. County in-kind contributions funds all but the projected costs of the research, production and distribution of the Score Card and the Children’s Summit, $45,000 and $6,000, respectively. The executive director and administrative support will be staff in the County Administrative Officer’s office. Logistical or operational support will from existing equipment and supplies budgeted in the CAO’s office.

Financing for the Score Card is proposed to come from the following sources:

Children’s Alliance of Yolo County
Proposed Plan
January 22, 2002

Background

In Yolo County, taxpayers annually spend millions of dollars on social, educational, juvenile justice and other services for children and families provided by county government, the schools, and our cities, Non-profit and community agencies, not to mention parents, spend millions more. Yet, today in Yolo County:

- Many families live daily with significant stress caused by violence, depression, severe financial difficulties, or inadequate housing.
- Fifteen percent of all children in the county have no health insurance.
- Twenty percent of children live in families with annual incomes less than $18,000 to support a family of four.

Although more than fifty councils, boards, advisory groups and collaboratives work on a broad range of issues affecting children and families, we know very little about how well, collectively, we are doing. Currently, we have no way of putting the pieces together, of discovering who is doing what, or knowing if, overall, we are using our public and private resources wisely. We have no comprehensive mechanism to solve the most pressing problems faced by our children, or to ensure that we are delivering multiple services effectively.

Progress to Date

Or, June 27, fifty representatives of city and county government, school districts, rural communities, the business and faith communities, health care, local non-profit organizations, higher education, parents, youth and others from throughout Yolo County came together and decided that a county-wide alliance would benefit all groups working on behalf of children, youth and families. Rather than a new layer of bureaucracy, this alliance would be a tool to assess and coordinate existing resources, maximize existing services, and fill gaps. It would:

- Be designed, funded, and “owned” by all sectors of the community.
- Address the “whole child” from birth to 18, rather than specific programs, age groups or funding streams.
- Be committed to ensuring continuing and extensive public involvement in its work to support Yolo County’s children and families.
- Identify the areas of greatest need for our kids, focus action and resources to make specific improvements and be accountable for results.
- Have its own independent identity, budget and staff.

Since July, a broadly representative steering committee has defined the purpose and initial activities of the group, now called the Children’s Alliance of Yolo County (CAYC). The Alliance will:

- Assess the condition of Yolo County’s children by developing a Score Card measuring the extent to which children are healthy, safe, ready for and succeeding in school, out of trouble, contributing to the community, and prepared for adulthood, both in the county as a whole and within ethnic and geographic communities.
• Use the Score Card to identify the highest priority issues and needs of children and families, which can be effectively addressed through collaborative action and resources, and better integrated service delivery. (i.e. gangs, child abuse/substance abuse, after school programs).
• Convene a Children’s Summit to identify community priorities and resources.

Over the next year, CAYC will develop either a non-profit organization or Joint Powers Authority between County of Yolo, other local governments and public education agencies, to establish a permanent legal structure for the organization. Within two to three years, CAYC proposes to link the county-wide Alliance with regional councils in the Capay Valley, Davis, Knights Landing, Winters, Woodland, and West Sacramento/Clarksburg. These regional alliances will plan for and implement joint strategies specific to the local community.

To get this effort started, the Children’s Alliance of Yolo County will establish a transitional office within the County Administrative Officer’s (CAO) office. The CAYC leadership team will recruit an executive director with experience in developing and organizing collaborative efforts, reporting directly to the CAO and the CAYC Leadership Team. This individual will be responsible for providing staff support, implementing a permanent organizational structure and membership; initiating a contract for a Score Card; and developing focused collaborative projects.

A budget of $168,500, including a $65,950 in-kind contributions from the County, will be needed during the first year to launch and staff the organization, develop a Score Card and sponsor a Children’s Summit. These funds will be gathered from all sectors of the community-city and county government, education, non-profit organizations and employers.
